

Inside Scene

smart tv feature

ABSTRACT

Purchase or save items of interest from a show or documentary, all from the pause screen.

Inside Scene is a smart tv feature concept aimed at merging Amazon's established rapport as an online retailer into the viewing experience on television via Prime Video.

MY ROLE

user research, user interviews, wireframing, and visual design

DURATION

March - May 2019

TOOLS

paper, sketch, invision studio

Amazon partners with Snapchat to make shopping from visual search accessible.

Being able to explore further what's right in front of you is what I want to expand in the FireTV experience. Already users get to find out who from the cast is in the scene at any point in the video. Why not expand it to include looks, merchandise, music, and more?

Instgram Shopping has made integrating commerce into applications not initially designed for it, more acceptable.

130 million IG accounts tap on a shopping post to every month. IG has also expanded to allow businesses to setup their checkout process within the app, so users don't have to leave IG to complete their purchase(s). Creating this for video would expand upon the concept and reach.

TARGET AUDIENCE

Meet Toddy, Kelly, and Chase —people in my target audience.

USER SCENARIO

Toddy's resting at home and feels like watching an episode of Suits.

Toddy enjoys show and movies that are abuzz amongst her friends and have gripping plots. She likes to stream them at home with her husband. She's recently started watching Suits, a legal drama, and realizes she admires the outfits worn, especially those by Jessica Pearson. Toddy considers getting a similar outfit.

- Owns a Toshiba TV
- Uses Prime Video
- Comfortable with web, mobile, tablets, and tvs
- Uses iPhone, Macbook, iOS, & Android

Toddy decides to watch an episode of Suits with her hubby.

She likes how Jessica's dressed and wants to learn more about her. Toddy pauses for Inside Scene.

Toddy now wants to learn more about her style and switches to Looks.

Swiping between looks she spots one she like and adds it to her wishlist.

Here is Toddy's take on what a feature like Inside Scene means for her:

- Do you use Prime Video?

What often inspires her to watch a show or movie is if everyone is talking about the show, if she has the time to watch it, and if it's available. Prime Video is more of a last resort when searching for movies to watch. She normally streams series on other SVOD sites. If Prime Video were to structure content based on suggestions, as she is used to on other platforms, she would spend more time on Prime Video. Having to put more effort into search than she has to on other platforms causes her to prioritize Prime Video less.

- What benefits do you see from this concept?

She can see how the project would be beneficial and doesn't have issue with the appearance of more information while the screen is paused. She can imagine that information being accessible before the program, on pause within, and appearing during the credits.

- Have you any recommendations for this project?

"I have to experience it before I indulge in it." Context-specific content should appear when the user pauses, whenever they pause.

“[When Scandal was running] I wanted her whole wardrobe...her long stemmed line glasses especially...I felt like the aesthetic went with my lifestyle...”

Chase feels like re-watching his favorite show, Black Sails.

Chase is into all types of shows, but especially loves the ones that immerse you into other eras or worlds that dedicate not only the acting, but character's appearance and set design down to the smallest details. Unwinding at home, if he can't find one that is current, he turns to an older, classic show.
